VOL. XXVIII BELLEFONTE, PA., THURSDAY MORNING, AUGUST 5, 1897. NO. 30

A PROMISING LIFE CLOSED,

Hugh McAllister Beaver Passes to the Great Beyond.

DIED MONDAY MORNING AT 3 O'CLOCK

The Second Son of Ex-Governor James A. Beaver and His Wife, Mary McAllister Beaver—Born in Bellefonte and Educated at Academy and State College.

HIS LIFE AND CHRISTIAN WORK

Hugh McAllister Beaver, second son of ex-Governor James A. Beaver, passed away Monday morning at 3:00 o'clock at the home of his parents in this city. He had been suffering since last Thursday from appendicitis, and a specialist, Dr. Deaver, of Philadelphia, was sent for to perform an operation. He arrived Saturday, but decided that the patient was too weak to stand such an operation. The best of care and attention was given the young man, but all to no purpose, as he gradually grew worse until death came to his relief at the above stated time; and thus a bright and promising career is brought to a close. He has been engaged in Y. M. C. A. work for some time past and was a sincere Christian young man.

Hugh McAllister Beaver was born in Bellefonte, March 29th, 1873, and was, therefore, 24 years, 4 months and 3 days old. He grew up in Bellefonte and received his education at the Bellefonte Academy and the State College. He was a son of General James A. Beaver and Mrs. Mary McAllister Beaver, and leaves two brothers, Gilbert A. Beaver, International College Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and Thomas Beaver, a student at the State College.

The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock, from the Presbyterian church. Dr. William Laurie conducted the services. Interment in Union cemetery.

HIS LIFE AND CHRISTIAN WORK.

Monday morning about 3:00 o'clock a beautiful and useful earthly life closed, and another saint was gathered into the heavenly home to enjoy what God has prepared, and enter upon the work and the worship that shall be eternal. The earthly life of Hugh McAllister Beaver began on March 29th, 1873, and it closed on August 2nd, 1897. With the exception of about two years in Harrisburg, while his father was Governor, he received his preliminary education in the Bellefonte Academy. This was followed by a four years course at State College from which he graduated in June, 1895. Hugh Beaver was always a frank, kindly, manly boy, full of energy, and most self-respecting. Meeting all in a frank, kindly way, the trend of his influence was always upward. By a natural instinct he not only turned away from the evil, but with equal firmness he avoided the questionable. This was a life characteristic.

Always conscientious, he gave his heart to the Saviour and united with the Presbyterian church of this place on October 11th, 1890. From that time his work for the Master was most decided. While engaging in all the innocent amusements of other college boys, he drew the line firmly against what he believed to be wrong. Naturally impetuous and self-forgetful, the right and the wrong were never forgotten. From the beginning of his Christian life his heart went out to the saving of souls. When engaged in that he seemed to forget all about his natural strength, but went on until he could do no more. Among his college mates many will ever bless the day when he won them to Christian service. So successful had he been in his work in State College that as soon as he graduated he was elected College Secretary of Pennsylvania State Young Men's Christian Association. His success in this was remarkable. In the summer of 1896 he attended the College Conference for the Pacific slope, and conducted the Bible work among the students during the Conference. This gave universal satisfaction.

Many times he availed himself of the summer meetings under Mr. Moody in Northfield. So highly was he held by Mr. Moody that he said to a friend, that he called Hugh Beaver, John, the son of Zebedee. At the last Conference, just closed a few weeks ago, he put Hugh Beaver in charge at Northfield of the class of over one hundred and fifty ladies, graduates of Vassar, Smith, Wellesley, Cornell and other leading colleges of the land, to train them to be Christian workers. Finding too few not yet in the kingdom themselves he changed the character of the work, making it one rather for ingathering than for training workers. In that he was most successful, many of the strongest and most scholarly graduates of the colleges coming out frankly from the world, trusting in and declaring for the service of the Saviour. So impressed was Mr. Moody with his work and power for good in this direction that he pressed him to resign his College work and take the chair of The English Bible at Mt. Hermon School, thus giving his entire time to Northfield. Though Mr. Hugh Beaver declined this with his characteristic modesty despite all that Mr. Moody could say, he would have had no little difficulty to escape the position but for another demand that was made upon him.

In the city of New York there are over 15,000 students in the various colleges. In September last a Student Movement of the Young Men's Christian Association of the City of New York took form and began its work. The leading business men of New York determined that Mr. Hugh Beaver should be the General Secretary. He felt that this would be too heavy and exhausting for him, and so declared. This was met by the assurance that he was the man for the work, and that he could have all the money that he could use in the work without the asking; that money was no object. So strong was the pressure that he resigned some months ago his position as College Secretary of Pennsylvania State Young Men's Christian Association, and accepted the General Secretaryship of the Student Movement of the Young Men's Christian Association of the City of New York. He was to have entered upon that work on the 1st of September, but his earthly work was done, and God took him. He will be sorely missed here by many, but he was needed in the heavens.

AMONG POLITICIANS

Governor Hastings as a Candidate for United States Senator.

THE AMNOUNCEMENT CAUSES TALK

Senator Quay Has Nothing to Say on the Subject but Talks Freely Concerning His Coming Trip Abroad.

HIS TOUR WILL BE EXTENSIVE

PHILADELPHIA, August 1.—The announcement that Governor Hastings proposes to come out as a candidate for United States Senator to succeed Senator Quay, and the statement by the latter of his intention to leave the United States shortly for an eight months' trip among the islands of the Pacific, created considerable commotion to-day at Atlantic City among the politicians who have kept near the senior senator since his arrival there.

The news of Governor Hastings' candidacy was told Senator Quay by a political friend from West Virginia, who gave as his authority some Bellefonte friends of the Governor, one of whom, a close business friend, is said to have left the information slip accidentally. Senator Quay declined to discuss the reported candidacy, and said: "I know nothing about it except what was told me to-day."

Continuing, he said he did not feel any alarm about it and then he began to speak of his trip abroad. He said he would leave Atlantic City to-morrow and come to this city, where he will remain a day or two. He will then go to Sewickley, Pa., and spend about two weeks with his son Dick. "From there," he said, "I will go to St. Lucia, Fla., and if nothing unforseen happens, I will go to San Francisco about the latter part of September and sail for Hawaii."

From this place the senator announced his intention of going through the Samoan islands and the Solomon group, after which the journey will be continued to Australia. From that point the return home will be made and the senator wil arrive back about April or May of next year.

LAID TO REST.

Dr. Samuel E. Noll Laid in the Tomb Saturday Morning.

Saturday friends from far and near gathered at the home of Mrs. Emeline Noll, at Pleasant Gap, to pay their last respects to her son, who was loved and honored by all who knew him.

The home was crowded by 9:00 o'clock, but still the people came, and it was estimated that nearly fifteen hundred sorrowing friends were present. The day was a perfect one, and the house not being very large the services were held in the front yard. Chairs and benches were provided for the people, by which they were very comfortably seated.

Rev. Dr. Gearhart made a very earnest prayer at the beginning, it being followed by a beautiful hymn entitled "He is Gone," after which Rev. McIlnay, pastor of the Methodist church of that place, made a beautiful prayer, and then a very pretty piece entitled "Home" was rendered by the choir.

Rev. Gearhart then spoke very beautifully on the life of Samuel Noll, his text being taken from the 11th chapter of St. John, the 26th verse: "I am the Resurrection and the Life." He spoke of what a moral, Christian young man Dr. Noll had been, and that he was a devoted member of the Reformed church. He concluded with a very impressive prayer, after which the choir rendered that beautiful piece "Home, Sweet Home." The funeral then moved slowly to the Zion cemetery where the last rites were paid to this immortal coil.

At the cemetery the Knights of Golden Eagle had charge of the services which were very impressive and solemn. Messrs. Boyd Musser and James McClure done the speaking. At the grave the choir sang very beautifully, "Sleep the Last Sleep." The services were then brought to a close and the people departed to their many homes.

The pall-bearers were chosen from the K. G. E. and were as follows: S. D. Gettig, Esq. A. Lukenbach, Ottis Hile, Wm. Brooks, D. D. Tate, Jno. S. Yearick, Jno. C. Mulfinger, W. Harrison Walker, Esq.

The young ladies and gentlemen who rendered the beautiful singing were schoolmates and relatives, and are as follows:

Miss Annie Brooks, organist; Misses Margarette Miller, Edna Miller, Clara Gentzel, Bella Hyde, Messrs. Andrew Swartz, Laurie Hyle, Harry Gentzel, Elmer Swartz, Henry Twitmyer.

General Improvement in Business.

CHAMBERS, NEBRASKA, July—, 1897. While this is a farming community, and there is little to report in the way of improvement in manufactures, there are unmistakable and gratifying evidences of general business improvement. A new creamery, recently established at a very considerable cost, is distributing large sums of money among the farmers, while the enhanced prices of cattle and grain, especially, are enabling them to pay off their debts and pay better wages to farm hands.

WHEN TO GO TO THE YUKON.

A Bellefonte Gold Syndicate Dissolved.

Many people are anxiously rushing to the gold fields of Klondyke regardless of the seasons of that country where there is but one month of spring, one month of summer, one month of fall, the balance of the nine months being winter with the thermometer at 76° below zero. The proper time to arrive at Juneau would be about the first of May when spring commences and then you will have about five hundred miles of a tramp over lofty mountains to the gold fields. You take a vessel at Seattle for Juneau, the former being the terminus of the North Pacific railroad.

The following we clip from the Williamsport Grit:

Notwithstanding Bellefonte is located on a side track of the Pennsylvania railroad, the gold fever has struck this place and is fast becoming epidemic. The other day five of our young men held a meeting and resolved themselves into a gold syndicate into which each one was to pay $1,000 at a future meeting, for expences to Alaska and while there. Last evening was the time set, and as soon as the meeting was called to order, Mr. George Meek stated that since their last meeting he had consulted his physician, who had informed him that his going was a physical impossibilty, and that if he should succeed in reaching Alaska, 20 minutes afterward he would be frozen solid. Knowing George's thinness and slimness, the other members of the syndicate recognized his physician's diagnosis to be correct. Mr Charles Kurtz then stated that he had intended going to Alaska, and after gathering in a sufficient quantity of its golden pebbles returned as one of Alaska's United States Senators, but since their last meeting he has consulted his best girl and she had seriously and emphatically objected, alleging it was a scheme to "shake her," although he had promised to marry her upon his return, loaded with golden ducats and political honors, so he thought he would remain at home. Mr. Joseph Montgomery stated that he had consulted Mrs. Montgomery and she had put her foot flat down on his going, and he said as he had but recently been married he thought he had better remain with his wife at least for a year, and after that time he hoped to meet the boys on the icy Yukon. These withdrawals left but two members of the syndicate, Messrs. Thomas Morris and Templeton Cruse, who are resolved on the venture, and who said they would form another syndicate, and no person should be a member unless he had been married at least five years. Although Mr. Mortimer Donahue offered to pay into the syndicate $1,500 against the others' $1,000, he was rejected, because he was a single man and might have a best girl, and they weren't going to have any more monkeying of that kind. Mr. Morris thinks they will be able to form another syndicate and reach the Alaska gold regions about the time of the Spring freshets.

A MAN OF GENIUS.

Captain John Walker sat alone in his quarters, reading a tremblingly scrawled note that sent old memories surging thickly through his brain and dimmed for an instant the gleam of his fearless blue eyes, and caused his strong teeth to close more fiercely on the stem of his briar wood pipe.

"My dear old Jack: The thought has come upon me—now, as I lie here, with the night swiftly coming on—that I must write to you—that I must see you. If you will come to me—if you will look with those dear, honest eyes into mine—if you will hold my hand, and tell me that you have learned to forget and forgive all the muddle—all the dreams; if you will whisper that you have learned to pity the dreamer, I think I can be happy even now. But you must not think that I love him the less; it is never that. I want you both to be friends; and I want to talk to you, for the last time. It cannot matter now, dear Jack, I am dying. Will you come?—Eva."

Captain John Walker crushed the note in his hand, and sprang up, with a sob smothered in his throat.

"Dying!—Eva dying! my little Eva! And she wants to see me. I wonder where that mooney idiot of a husband is; writing more of those eternal lyrics, that will never be published, save by the medium of obscure subscription. It's a lucky thing the fellow had money of his own, or they would have starved long since. Dying! It's too awful—it's—Here, Childers, get my things together; I'm going out of town. And look out for the next train—and ask Lieutenant North to see me at once—and hurry up."

The man of war had taken up a lost and broken thread of seven years back, merely to find that it ravelled out in his fingers after all, and left his eager hands empty. For he had come to the woman as her tired eyes were closing on the great mystery men call life. He had stood, silent and baffled, and helpless beside the one woman who had ever brought any softer rays of beauty into his stern life—had stood there, in awe and despair of that relentless, unseen power which was slowly creeping in to snatch her from him. And, when the end had come, and he had loosened her fingers from his own, and had kissed the calm lips that never more should breathe his name, and had staggered from the room, Captain John Walker treasured in his heart the remembrance of a pair of wistful, dying eyes—some half-dozen broken sentences—and added them to the memories of seven long years before, and was grateful.

But now, he stood in another room, looking out moodily through the long French windows, at an old-world garden—thinking, perchance, of how often that dainty figure now so still in the darkened upper room, had flitted through it during the seven years that were gone. The afternoon sunlight streamed in full upon him as he stood there, while on the further side of the room, in the shadow, there paced restlessly to and fro, with hands clasped behind his back, and head bent, the figure of the husband—Maitland Kearsley.

A tall, thin man, with stooping shoulders, and long hair falling untidily upon the collar of his velvet coat; a man who had doubtless at one time been handsome. Even now his features were fine, and regular; but their expression was marred by a look of peevish ill-humor that had furrowed the high forehead, and left deep indentations about the rather large mouth. When he spoke—as he did now, without stopping in his restless movement to and fro—his voice was high and rasping, with a peculiarly irritating drawl in his tones.

The captain turned his head slowly, with raised eyebrows, and looked at the tall figure pacing to and fro; not without some contemptuous wonderment. He had turned his head again and was looking moodily out of the window when the door was suddenly thrust open, and a childish voice broke the silence of the room.

"I will know—I will know!" cried the voice passionately. "No one will tell me; they only shake their heads and cry and turn away. And her door is locked, and they will not let me in, and she does not hear me when I call to her. Father, what have they done with her?"

The captain turned and saw a sturdy, velvet-clad boy—a mere child of some six years—standing in the middle of the room. There was a desperate earnestness about the little figure, and yet, withal, a sense of timid reluctance, as though he stood in some place to which he was denied, that touched the man of war. There was something else, too, that touched him and startled him even more than that. It was in the childish face, flushed and tear-stained and eager; it was so like that other face that the unseen power had touched, and claimed, and stilled forever—so like, and yet so unlike. The fair hair was massed about his face in the same picturesque confusion; the same dark eyes were here. Only his face was young and fresh, and hopeful; the other, as the captain had seen it last, might have been all these in some far off time, but had been then but a shadowy picture, fast dimming. Probably the captain remembered only the far-off time.

Maitland Kearsley stopped in his walk and faced the boy petulantly, stamping his foot like an irritable child.

"You little barbarian!" he burst out; "how dare you come in here? Go away at once, sir! I'll have you sent away to school.

"I won't go away," said the child. 'I'll stop here until you tell me where mamma is. She was always lonely when I was away from her. They sent me away this morning; it was a trick—I know it was. I won't go until you tell me."

The captain was about to speak when Kearsley, with a harsh cry, caught up a stick that stood in a corner and rushed at the child. The little fellow did not move, but the captain sprang forward and caught the father's upraised arm and twisted the stick from his grasp and sent the poet reeling backward some paces.

"What are you doing, man?" he cried hotly, flinging the stick from him. "Would you beat a child like that?"

"Yes, I would," almost snarled the other. "I have told him a thousand times over not to enter this room. I will not be disturbed at any time.

"You discard all else—even your dead wife's boy?" said the captain slowly. "And behave like a wild beast to him when he comes to you in his loneliness and misery."

"What of that?" exclaimed the other, pacing the room. "I tell you, sir, that I owe a duty to posterity—my art, my poetry——"

"You owe a duty to her child, man!" cried the captain angrily. "Your poetry! Good God, man—have you lived with the Muses so long and never learned the sanctity, the beauty, the poesy of the soul of a little child?"

Mr. Maitland Kearsley was staggered. He paused in his restless walking to and fro, and faced the soldier somewhat sullenly.

"I have yet to learn that you have the right to teach me my duty, sir," he said. "What do you want?"

With a sudden resolve in his heart Captain John Walker faced the other.

"I want you to let me take the boy with me—now, at once—for a holiday. A house of death is no place for him; let him go away with me, and forget. He's a dear little chap—I like him—and"—this with something of an effort—"I suppose he is rather troublesome to you at times."

"It seems quite extraordinary—I—suppose it's very good of you—I don't quite understand. But, yes—yes—take him if you like, by means; I should send him away, in any case. Take him away, certainly." He glanced at his writing table and moved toward it. "I—I am busy—very busy. Many new and delightful thoughts are surging in upon me. Yes—take him away."

The captain had put his arm about the child, and had bent to him, with a whispered word, and he now silently drew the boy from the room, the childish eyes, so like those other eyes, looking up at him trustingly.

With that day began a new life for Captain John Walker—a life that had as its guiding force the child of his dead love. The boy and the man were inseparable; the boy absolutely happy with one who understood and loved him; the man a warmer-hearted, more charitable being for the thought of the sunny-faced, merry-eyed boy who clung to him. The father was a forgotten quantity. The child was taught to swim, to ride, to be absolutely fearless—and to obey the captain's own strict code of duty.

"Understand, Jack," the captain had said, with a grave finger upraised, "if ever I find that you have done a mean or cruel action, or ever allow any one to lick you without fighting until you couldn't stand, or ever funked anything, or ever told a lie, or ever bragged, or been anything but a gentleman, I'll send you back to your father. That will be the only place for you."

The warning was scarcely needed; the boy was all even the honest soldier could have desired. But, in course of time, Mr. Maitland Kearsley came to have a curious feeling in regard to his absent offspring. It was not love. He had no real affection for the boy; it was rather an indefinite feeling of wounded vanity—a petulant surprise that the boy should have no wish to return to him.

"I do not believe in affection," he murmured to himself once. "All-absorbing passion, that sweeps a man's soul with it, is another thing—a worshipful quantity. The domestic affections are made up of a mundane desire for creature comforts and sustenance, for the most part, assisted by a mistaken sense of duty. But I hoped that the child would have been drawn by the intellectual side of my character, and would have become a species of disciple to me. I am surprised that he should cling to that terribly brusque, commonplace soldier."

His thoughts found expression in a letter, suggesting to the captain that the boy's holiday had been sufficiently prolonged, and asking that he should be sent home. In his simplicity, Captain John Walker consulted his solicitor, laying before him the whole story. There was, of course, but one answer; the child must be given up. The captain impatiently told the man of law that he was an ass and strode out of the office. But he, nevertheless, wrote a curt note, informing Mr. Maitland Kearsley that he would bring the boy down on a certain day; he felt that there was nothing else to be done. So it happened that on the very day in question Captain John Walker stood in the poet's house, with a very white face, and with the child clinging to him, while the poet stood, watching the pair, with something of a triumphant smile about the corners of his mouth.

"In obedience to your request, Kearsley, I have brought the boy back again. I will not say anything of my own feelings in the matter; I have learned to love him very dearly, but that is outside the question; you have, of course, the right." He stooped and kissed the bright hair of the boy who clung to him. "Jack—go to your father, my boy."

The boy glanced up at him for a moment, and then with quivering lips, walked slowly toward Kearsley. But he suddenly burst into a passion of weeping, and, flinging himself on the floor, sobbed as though his heart would break. The captain was turning away, with dim eyes, when the sound of Kearsley's voice arrested him, speaking in querulous tones.

"You frightful child!" he was saying, "get up from there! You know I can't bear scenes of this description; they are so absurdly theatrical. You're a most ungrateful little beast; a few thrashings will do you all the good in the world. They've made a fool of you, since you've been away."

He stooped and caught the boy roughly by the shoulder and dragged him to his feet. Captain John Walker wheeled round and shouted:

"Let the child alone! Come here Jack!" Then, as the trembling boy ran to him, and was encircled by his arm, he spoke again, and his words rang out in the silence of the room like pistol shots. "No, Maitland Kearsley, I'm damned if you do! I love the child, and I won't leave him here, or anywhere else, to be the victim of your blows—of your childish ill-temper. I think I'm more to him than you will ever be or ever have been, and, law or no law, I'll keep him—by the Lord, I will! Keep back, man, or I'll break your own cowardly stick over that addled head of yours yet. Come Jack; you and me hold together until you tire of me."

* * * * *

Maitland Kearsley has decided not to trouble further about his unnatural child. To a friend, of kindred tastes, he recently confided the fact that he had been bitterly disappointed in the boy. "In fact," he added, "I have abandoned all thoughts of him. His mother was a most worthy woman, but a terrible Philistine, and the boy follows in her unhallowed steps. More than that, he has shown that he has a decided preference for the commonplace."

SOWING SEED WITH ARTILLERY.

A Rocky Crag was thus Successfully Planted with Trees.

Alexander Nasmyth, the landscape painter, was a man fruitful in expedients. The Duke of Athol consulted him as to some improvements which he desired to make in his woodland scenery near Dunkeld. Among other things, a certain rocky crag needed to be planted with trees, to relieve the grim barrenness of its appearance. The question was how to do it, as it was impossible for any man to climb the crag in order to set seed or plants in the clefts of the rock. A happy idea occurred to Nasmyth. Having observed in front of the castle a pair of small cannon, it occurred to him to turn them to account. A number of tin canisters were filled with all sorts of suitable tree seeds. The cannon were loaded and the canisters were fired against the high face of the rock. They burst and scattered the seed in all directions. Some years after Nasmyth was delighted to find that his scheme of planting by artillery had proved successful; the trees were flourishing in all the recesses of the cliff.

HE SAT ON THE CASE.

And Was Perfectly Sure That Life was Extinct When He Got Up.

A very ignorant but well-to-do citizen from the backwoods was elected Coroner of a small county. A few days after his election he amazed the ordinary by asking that functionary to point out his duties for him. "Why," said the ordinary, "when a man drops dead, or is killed by an engine, or blown up with dynamite, you simply impanel a jury and sit on him, and then render a verdict." "That's jest what I done two hours ago," said the Coroner, "an' the citizens air kickin'!" "Kickin' about what?" "The man what I sot on." "Well?" "Well, you see, hit was this way. He drapped by the railroad thar, an' hollered out, 'Boys, I'm dead!'" "Well?" "I wuz standin' in three feet of him, and 'as he hollered them words I jumped him." "Jumped him?" "I mean I sot on him—jest like the coroners air required by law; as I weigh right smart, he kep purty quiet after I handed!" "But he was dead before you reached him, wasn't he?" "That's whar the question comes in! Ain't but one thing erbout it that's shore an 'certain, an' that is—he wuz dead when I got up!"—Atlanta Constitution.

The Railroad Man's Condition.

Among a batch of stories attributed to President Lincoln is the following good one on President Tyler. "During Mr. Tyler's incumbency of the office he arranged to make an excursion in some direction, and sent his son 'Bob' to arrange for a special train. It happened that the railroad superintendent was a strong Whig. As such he had no favors to bestow on the President, and informed 'Bob' that his road did not run any special trains for the president. 'What,' said 'Bob,' 'did you not furnish a special train for the funeral of President Harrison?' 'Yes,' said the superintendent, 'and if you'll bring your father in that condition you shall have the best train on the road.'"

Took an Electric Light to Bed.

A Lynchburg drummer nearly caused a serious conflagration at one of the leading hotels in St. Louis the other night. The weather was cold, and he took an incandescent light, which had a long connection to it, in his room, wrapped a bed sheet around it, and placed it in the foot of the bed to keep his feet warm. He was awakened some hours afterward by smoke and roasted feet. The light had set fire to his bed, which was in full blaze, and was extinguished after much difficulty. The globe to the light had become soft and plastic from the heat and assumed an almost flat shape.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Reasons why the Work of the Young Men's Christian Association Should be Supported.

There was a time when the work of the Young Men's Christian Association had to be carefully explained and the plans and methods set forth to enlist co-operation and support; but this period has long since passed, and the institution known to the smallest boy as the "Young Men's" is familiar to towns with a population of from three or four thousand upwards.

No apology is necessary for its existence. It has come to stay. It has been called the greatest movement of the Nineteenth century, and every liberal minded person who has given the work any thought or study must admit that it has been a mighty power in moulding the lives of thousands of young men, and has done much toward solving the question of the duty of the church to its young people.

There are many reasons why the Association should receive hearty support from those whom it must look to for help; but we will confine ourselves to a few reasons that are adapted to the conditions and work of the Bellefonte Association.

The first reason, that it is a church movement. The idea originated in the brain of active, thoughtful, Christian men, and it has been guided and controlled by members of the church. It is an inseperable part of the church life and work, in that men who have given it life and force are men who have been filled with the spirit of Christ; who have the desire to go about doing good. It is the church in power, organized to meet the ever changing needs of its young men.

Another reason for its support is because it is a movement for the moral welfare of our young men and boys. Any person looking into the work of the Association must acknowledge that it is a great blessing to have such an institution, where on an evening the young men may gather, away from contaminating influences, in a place where the whole atmosphere is distinctly Christian, and where the surroundings are such as develop all that is true and good and noble in the character. A young man must have companionships, and no matter how attractive the home may be, he will seek the society and fellowship of other young men. Where will he find it, if not in the saloons, billiard rooms, cigar stores and clubs? Suppose our Association were to be closed, what would become of the young men who frequent its rooms nightly? The social atmosphere at the Association is preventive of evil, and changes the hearts and lives of young men which have formerly been running in the wrong direction. It advances the interests of property and religion, and of social and domestic life. This being acknowledged, as it must be, the work deserves the hearty support and co-operation, financial and moral, of every public spirited citizen who has any interest in the community.

The final reason we would mention, why the Association should be given an unqualified support, is because some of our best men in church and state have expressed their profoundest belief in it, and have gladly added their best efforts to their endorsement. They are men of wisdom and experience, and of loyal Christian character, who have given time and money and energy to the work. This alone is sufficient evidence to us that the work is worthy of anything we may do to aid its increasing usefulness.

In our last edition of the REPUBLICAN we quoted a few testimonials of the work, as given by prominent business men in America. There are other endorsements fully as strong, which we take pleasure in placing before our readers, that they may form some idea of the magnitude of the work, and that it is appreciated not only by those who are directly benefitted, but by those who have large amounts of money invested in business. Read what ex-President Harrison and others have to say about the Association.

Ex-President Benjamin Harrison: "I think the first institution of which I was ever President was the Young Men's Christian Association of Indianapolis. It was in the early days of that Association, when the scope of the work and the zeal and intelligence of the membership and officers was very much less than it is to-day. I have ever since had an interest in this great organization, and have watched its growth and development and the influence for good morals and decency in our communities with great admiration, and I have been glad to have had even so slight an association with its beginning."

The late George R. Roberts:

"I am glad to bear testimony for myself, as well as for all our officers and employees, to the great value of all the various Railroad Branches of the Young Men's Christian Association established at different points upon the lines of this Company. This Company has taken a great interest in assisting these organizations from time to time, feeling that all we do in this direction is more than returned in the improved moral and intellectual condition of such of our employees as are brought under their influence."

Mr. William E. Dodge:

"The direct results of faithful, patient labor have been large and hopeful. The work is no longer, in any sense, an experiment. The fact has been demonstrated that a large number of young men in our city, who, from age and peculiar temptation, need aid, counsel, and Christian sympathy, can be reached and influenced by brotherly friendship and kindness."

Lake of Ink With Curative Power.

In the middle of the Cocopah hills, in Arizona, is what is known as the Lake of Ink. Though supplied by beautiful springs of clear water, the liquid of the lake is black and of an ink-like character. The temperature varies from 110° to 216°, according to the locality, and the water feels smooth and oily. According to the Indians, not only of the vicinity, but far away, the waters of the lake have strong medicinal qualities, though most white people would hesitate to adopt the mode of treatment prescribed.

The invalid is buried up to his mouth in the hot volcanic mud for from 20 to 30 minutes. Then he is carried, covered with mud, to the edge of the lake, into which he is plunged for from 15 to 20 minutes, after which he is rolled in a blanket and allowed to sweat on the hot, sulphurous sand or rock near by. The cures wrought are said to be wonderful.—Oregonian.

George Francis Train, the famous sage of Madison Square, who has for thirty years declined the companionship of any one but children, says, "I am a child myself."

If a man will live rightly and take proper care of his health during youth and maturity he may live to a green old age, and still be able to say with absolute truth, "I am a child myself." Youth is not a matter of years. Happiness is not a question of experiences. Youth is happiness and health is youth. The healthy person, young or old, will be a happy person. It is a simple matter to get the body into a healthy condition and then to keep it there. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the greatest of health makers and health savers. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It makes the appetite keen, the digestion and assimilation perfect, the liver active, the blood pure, the muscles strong, the brain clear, the nerves steady and every vital organ in the body healthy and vigorous. It makes firm, healthy flesh, but does not make corpulent people more corpulent. It does not make flabby flesh like cod liver oil. It purifies the blood and drives out the poisons of malaria and rheumatism. It is the best remedy for blood and skin diseases. It cures 98 per cent. of all cases of consumption. Grateful patients, who had been given up to die, have permitted their experiences, names, addresses and photographs to be reproduced in Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser. The sufferer who wishes to investigate may write to any of these. The 'Golden Medical Discovery' is sold by all medicine dealers, and only unscrupulous dealers will try to induce a customer to take some worthless substitute for the sake of a few pennies added profit.

Bicyclists Should Dismount.

The Supreme Court has laid down two rules which makes it very difficult for bicyclists to recover damages from a railroad company for accidents at crossings. The first is that no recovery of damages can be had if there is any contributory negligence on the part of the persons injured; and again, everybody must stop, look and listen before crossing the tracks.

Some time ago a bicyclist at Philadelphia was killed on a crossing and his widow sued for damages. But although it was shown that the company was negligent in not giving any warning of an approaching train and although the bicyclist looked and listened and made a circle with his wheel before crossing the tracks, still the Supreme Court decided against the widow because the man did not dismount. The case was that of Robertson vs. Pennsylvania railroad, which is reported in 180 Penna. Reports, page 43, in which the Supreme Court held that the bicycle stop, circling about is not a legal stop, but bicyclists must dismount, look and listen before crossing railroad tracks.

Killed While Picking Berries.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., July 30.—James C. Foreman, married, aged 45, was instantly killed at the Twelfth regiment rifle range this morning. He was engaged in picking berries at a point 250 yards back of the target, which had no backstop, and was in a stooping position. The ball passed through his head.

W. G. Stair, John Bond and W. J Davis, members of the rifle team that will represent company D in the regimental matches, were practicing at 200 yards and had fired twenty-one shots alternately. Foreman could not see the target, neither could the guardsman see Foreman. I could not be determined which man fired the fatal shot. The coroner will conclude his investigation to-morrow.

ACCIDENT AT SEA.

Four Members of a Crew Drowned in a Recent Collision.

THE NAMES OF THE VICTIMS

The Barkentine Florence Collided With the Allan Line Steamer Scandinavian on Saturday of Last Week.

WHAT A SURVIVOR SAYS OF IT

BOSTON, Mass., July 28.—The Allan line steamer Scndinavian arrived this afternoon from Glasgow and brought with her four survivers of the crew of the British barkentine Florence, Captain Henry Olsen, which was sunk in a collision with the Scandinavian last Saturday, while in a dense fog twenty miles south of Cape Race. Four members of the crew were drowned, together with the wife of Captain Olsen. The Florence was bound from Sydney to St. John, N. F., with a cargo of coal.

Captain Olsen said:

"We left port on Tuesday, the 20th inst., for St. Johns, N. F. On saturday, after being nearly three days in the fog and standing in all that time in the direction of Cape Race, N. F., thinking we were approaching land, I ordered the vessel put about on the starboard tack. At 10:20 p. m. the shrill blast of a steamer's whistle was heard right abeam and before the sound died away there loomed up, making directly for us, the huge hull of an ocean steamer.

"I was below when the first intimation came of the steamer,s approach, and was hurriedly called on deck by the lookout. On the way out of the cabin I called to my wife, and she in turn aroused First Mate Edward Brodnick, who had come off watch at noon and was asleep on his bunk. Hardly had he reached the deck when the steamer, which proved to be the Scandinavian, was upon us. She struck us on the port side between the main and mizzen rigging, and before her headway was stopped she went half way through us. While the vessels were locked together, we were in no immediate danger except from falling spart, which were dropping all about us on the decks. The order to reverse the steamer's engines, which had been given when we were first sighted, soon had the effect of breaking her away from us and in about three minutes after she pulled her sharp bow out of the gaping hole in the side of our vessel, the Florence went down stern first, in ninety fathoms of water. Of the vessel's crew, Norris, the cook, Yabeley and Norman were never seen after the vessel struck us. and they probably were asleep in the forecastle.

"When the impact came Olsen, the boatswain and Seaman Robert Essens jumped into the main rigging and were soon followed by Mate Brodnick and all three men swung themselves onto the steamer's deck by means of the lower guard, being assisted in doing so by the carpenter of the steamer. Poor Frye appeared at the side of the vessel just before she went down. A rope was thrown him by his shipmates on board the steamer and he was pulled half way up the steamer's side, when he relaxed his hold, fell back into the water and was never seen again."

A STRADIVARIUS IN ALASKA.

A $10,000 Violin the Friend and Companion of a Miner.

At the Cornet mine, on Berner's Bay, eighty-five miles northeast of Juneau, Alaska, in probably as bleak and wild a spot as can be found on this continent, can be heard on the long winter nights strains of harmony that have been lauded through the civilized world.

A traveller who has just returned says:

"One evening, as I was approaching the Cornet mine, I heard some one playing a violin, and though I had heard what have been termed the greatest masters of both hemispheres, I must say that such sounds as came from the unseen player I had never heard equalled.

"When I reached the camp I was welcomed by the superintendent, Willis E. Nowell, and after a hearty supper I asked him who was performing so beautifully on the violin as I approached the camp. Mr. Nowell said: 'I was the player, though your praise of my playing rather embarrasses me.' When I questioned the gentleman regarding his instruments he said the one he was playing was a Stradivarius, named 'Eliza,' for which he paid $10,000, but he also had the 'Nero,' which cost him $5,000.

"I discovered in a further conversation with the gentleman that he was an ex-professor of the Boston Conservatory of Music, and that previous to his coming to Alaska he had performed on the same instrument that nightly gave forth its melodious tones in that bleak region, in nearly every place in Europe.

"Mr. Nowell has been at the mine about three years, and says the solitude often inspires him to themes that all the grandeur of civilization could not bring forth. Mr. Nowell told me that from a child he had a love for the violin that gradually grew on him so that by the time he was twelve years old he had sufficiently mastered that instrument to make his professional debut.

"Mr. Nowell will probably stay at the mine a couple of years more, as he has an interest in the mine, and as it is very rich, as high as $27,000 having been taken out of pockets in three days. When asked if he would sell either of his instruments, he said: 'This mine is rich, but not rich enough to make me part with one of my loves, nor are all the mines in the world rich enough to make me part with either.'" —Portland Oregonian.

AN IMMENSE FARM.

It Consists of 1,500,000 Acres. The Fencing Said to Have Cost $50,000.

The largest farm in this country, and probably in the world, is situated in the southwestern part of Louisiana. It extends 100 miles north and west. It was purchased in 1883 by a syndicate of Northern capitalists, by whom it is still operated. At the time of its purchase its 1,500,000 acres was a vast pasture for cattle belonging to a few dealers in that country. Now it is divided into pasture stations for ranches, existing every six miles. The fencing is said to have cost about $50,000. The land is best adapted for rice, sugar, corn and cotton. A tract, say half a mile wide, is taken, and an engine is placed on each side. The engines are portable, and operate a cable attached to four plows. By this arrangement 30 acres are gone over in a day, with the labor of only three men.

There is not a single draught horse on the entire place, if we except those used by the herders of cattle, of which there are 16,000 head on the place. The Southern Pacific railway runs for 36 miles through the farm. The company have three steamboats operating on the estate, of which 300 miles are navigable. It has also an icehouse, bank, shipyard and rice mills.

Dissemination of Seed.

In a recent number of the bulletin of the Torrey Botanical Club, Prof. Byron D. Halsted points out that the pods of the well known Chinese wistaria are most effective catapults, expelling their seeds with a pistol-like explosion and scattering them far and wide. Everyone knows that our common witch-hazel acts similarly. Each cell of the woody capsule contains one large, bony, and shining seed, wedged into a cell too narrow to contain it. The seed is finally ejected with tremendous force and considerable noise. If one carries home a fruiting branch of witch-hazel and forgets about it he is alarmed some night by a violent bombardment. Even more surprising is the propulsive action of the sandbox of the West Indies. On one occasion an English traveler, carrying some of these fruits home in a steamer, had them explode in his trunk, and with difficulty proved that he was not a dynamiter. The squirting cucumber ejects its seeds in a fountain-like jet of muscilaginous water. One of the commonest devices resorted to for dispersion of seeds is the use of hooks, grapnels, or adhesive hairs. In some cases, as in Collomia, the hairs are not released until the seed reaches the proper moist locality, when they project and anchor it down.—Cosmopolitan.

He was Running the Theatre.

The late John Stetson, the shrewd but illiterate American theatrical manager of whom so many stories are told, once had a business manager under him whose name was Sharp. One day Stetson came to the theatre and saw a big sign above the door that said: "Matinee to-day at 2 o'clock sharp!" "Hallo," said Stetson, "seems to me that fellow's putting on airs! Take in that sign and put out one, 'Matinee today at 2 o'clock. Stetson.' I am running this theatre."

DANIEL MYERS,

OF PENNSYLVANIA.

A Living Object Lesson for Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure.

HEART DISEASE is curable. "For over forty years," writes Daniel Myers of Two Taverns, Pa., on Aug. 10, 1896, "I suffered with heart disease. First a slight palpitation, gradually growing worse. Then shortness of breath, sleeplessness, smothering sensations and much pain in the region of the heart alarmed me and I consulted a physician. Receiving no benefit I tried others and a number of remedies, spending a large amount of money, but finally became so bad that it was unsafe for me to leave home. I commenced using Dr. Miles' Heart Cure two years ago. For eighteen months I have been well. Although 72 years of age I can go where I wish and I sleep all night and wake up as cheerful as a babe and completely rested."

Dr. Miles Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on Heart and Nerves sent free to all applicants.

Baby's Smooth, Fair Skin

Is Due to Hood's Sarsaparilla—It Cured Him of Dreadful Scrofulous Sores—Now in Good Health.

"At the age of two months, my baby began to have sores break out on his right cheek. We used all the local external applications that we could think or hear of, to no avail. The sores spread all over one side of his face. We consulted a physician and tried his medicine, and in a week the sore was gone. But to my surprise in two weeks more another scrofulous looking sore made its appearance on his arm. It grew worse and worse, and when he was three months old, I began giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla. I also took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before the first bottle was finished, the sores were well and have never returned. He is now four years old, but he has never had any sign of those scrofulous sores since he was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, for which I feel very grateful. My boy owes his good health and smooth, fair skin to this great medicine." MRS. S. S. WORTEN, Farmington, Delaware.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. $1, six for $5. Be sure to get Hood's.

THE OHIO DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

Its Assertions and Arguments Considered and Answered.

[To be published in six parts.]

"Recognizing that the money question is paramount to all others at this time we invite attention to the fact that the constitution names silver and gold together as the money metals of the United States."

This statement is inaccurate and intentionally misleading. The only place in which the constitution "names silver and gold together" is where it declares that "no State shall make anything but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debt." It does not say that silver and gold shall both be coined in an unlimited manner or that either one or both shall be coined at all, but specifically gives to Congress the power to determine what the coinage of the United States shall be, both as to the metals used and their relations, by saying in explicit terms in section 8:

"The Congress shall have power to coin money and REGULATE the value thereof." It does not "name silver and gold together" as the platform says, but names gold and silver together, pointedly giving the preference to gold by saying in section 10: "No State shall made anything but gold and silver coin a payment for debt." If anything is to be inferred as to the relation which it intended that the two metals should bear it is clearly that gold was to be preferred, since it is first named in the only place where the metals are mentioned. If the framers of the platform wanted to be frank, why did they not follow the wording of the constitutition in their statement and say "gold and silver" instead of reversing it and saying "silver and gold."

"The first coinage law passed by Congress under the constitution made the silver dollar the money unit and admitted gold to free coinage at a ratio based upon the silver dollar unit."

The first coinage law clearly made gold a standard by first naming all the gold coins which, it said, should be of the value of a given number of units, and said that the unit should be "of the value of a Spanish milled dollar as the same is now current, and to contain 416 grains of standard silver." If the advocates of silver insist that this act interpreted the meaning of the constitution and that this interpretation must be followed, why do they now insist upon a standard silver dollar with only 412½ grains of silver instead of the 416 grains which the act specifically names? By their own proposition they demand a violation of what they claim is a constitutional requirement. This act which they claim is an interpreation of the constitution on this question provides that "every fifteen pounds' weight of pure silver shall be of equal value in all payments with one pound weight of pure gold." If this is an interpretation of the constitution why do these sticklers for its observance propose to violate it by saying that every sixteen pounds' weight of silver shall now be equal to one pound of gold? Would there not be equal authority for saying that every seventeen or eighteen or twenty or thirty pounds' weight of silver shall be equal to one pound weight of gold? By their own proposition to change the ratio they admit that neither the constitution nor the first act passed under it is binding as to the future relations of gold and silver as money. The fact that this act specifically said "that every fifteen pounds' weight of pure silver shall be of equal value with one pound weight of pure gold" indicates that gold was intended to be the measure of value, for had the framers of this act intended that silver should be the measure they would have said that one pound of gold should be equal in value to fifteen pounds of silver. Alexander Hamilton, who was one of the framers of the constitution and whose report to Congress was the basis of this act said of the alleged unit, the Spanish dollar, "that species of coin has never had any settled or standard value * * * while gold has a fixed price by weight with an eye to its fineness. This greater stability of the value of gold coins is an argument of force for regarding the money unit as having been hitherto virtually attached to gold rather than silver."

If the framers of this platform insist that the first coinage act passed under the constitution is an exact interpretation of the meaning of that instrument, why have they and their party always insisted that a protective tariff is a violation of the constitution when they know that the very first act passed under that constitution declared that the tariff duties which it levied were "for the support of government and the ENCOURAGEMENT AND PROTECTION of manufactures?"

PART II.

"We declared that the act of 1873, demonetizing silver without the knowledge and approval of the American people," etc.

The act of 1873 did not demonetize silver, as is claimed by this sentence of the platform. The act itself says in specific terms that "this act shall not be construed to affect any act done, right accrued or penalty incurred under former acts, but every such right is hereby saved," thus clearly stating that it did not demonetize any of the coins authorized prior to that date, while every one of the four hundred and fifty million standard silver dollars coined since the passage of that act is and has constantly been a full legal tender, and none of them is or has been demonetized.

The act of 1873 was not passed "without the knowledge and approval of the American people" as the platform asserts. It was submitted to Congress in April, 1870, printed thirteen times, discussed at intervals until January 1, 1873 (nearly three years), the debates and discussions filling 144 pages of the Congressional Record, which was published daily during the session in which it was discussed. The American people had ample opportunity to know all of its provision, and that there was no popular disapproval of it is shown by the fact that 112 of the Members of the House which passed it were re-elected, many of them continuing to serve in Congress to the end of their lives, while several are still members of that body, notably, William M. Stewart, of Nevada, who voted for the bill and who, in a speech delivered in June, 1874, said: "The laboring man and the producer is entitled to have his product and his labor measured by the same standard of value that measures your national debt. You require from the laboring man gold to pay the interest on your national debt, which is right, which can not be avoided if you mean to save national honor; but then give him the same money with which to pay that debt. The question will never be decided until you determine the single question whether the laboring man is entitled to have a gold dollar if he earns it, or whether you are going to cheat him with something else."

"We declare that the act of 1873 * * * has resulted in the appreciation of gold."

It has not "resulted in the appreciation of gold," because gold has not appreciated. Any article "appreciates" in value only when there is and increased demand for it either because of the reduction in the quantity or an enlarged need for it in the current affairs of life. The figures of the statisticians show that the gold coin of the world and the total money of the world have increased much more rapidly than the population since 1873, hence the absurdity of the claim that it has "appreciated" in value, as the amount for each individual in the world has greatly increased since the passage of the act in question. The gold money of the world has more than doubled since 1873, the silver money of the world has nearly or quite trebled in that time and the paper money has also increased largely, while the population of the world has increased only 25 per cent in the same period. It is thus evident that the total amount of money for each individual in the world is much greater than in 1873 and that there can thus be no increased per capita demand for gold and hence no "appreciation" in its value, while the fact that a large proportion of the business of the world is now performed with checks, drafts and other forms of credit without the direct use of money further reduce the demand upon gold. The mines of the world produce more gold to-day than they produced of gold and silver together in 1873, the silver production of today is nearly three times what it was in 1873 and the amount of silver now annually coined is more than was produced from the mines of the world in 1873. The number of silver dollars coined in the United States in the fiscal year just ended was two and a half times as many as in the entire history of the mints prior to 1873 and the total number of full legal tender dollars coined by our mints since 1873 is 56 times as many as were coined in the entire hisory of the mint prior to the act of 1873.

Part III.

"We declare that the act of 1873 * * * resulted in an appreciation of gold and a corresponding fall in prices."

Since it is shown from official statistics that there has been no appreciation of gold but on the contrary a vast increase in its production and coinage and an increase in the other classes of money of the world, an increase much more rapid than that of the population, the cause of the fall in prices of commodities must be looked for elsewhere. This fall in prices is due to the enormous increase in production, and to the reduced cost of producing and transporting the products of the farm, factory, forest and mine. Senator Peffer, in his report to the Senate in 1894 on the cause of the fall in agricultural prices, said. "In Kansas it appears from the report of the Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture that it costs 50 cents to raise a bushel of wheat, * * * in Pennsylvania the average cost of producing a bushel of wheat is about 65 cents. * * * Wheat in India costs but about 13 cents a bushel on the farm, 12 cents more puts it aboard ship and 35 cents additional lands it on the wharves in Liverpool. This fifty-cent wheat from India competes (in our best market, England) with wheat on American farms at an average cost of 60 cents per bushel. * * * Wages of India farm hands run from 6 to 10 cents of our money per day." The same report shows that the cost of producing wheat on the great farms of California and the Dakotas is less than half the average cost in the Central Mississippi valley, while similar conditions prevail in Argentine and Australia, which through the extremely low ocean freights are also competitors with us in all the markets of the world. The reduced cost of agricultural products, due to the combination of low freights and the use of machinery finds a parallel in the reduced cost of manufacturing in all lines through similar causes, and also in the reduction in the cost of mining and the production of the precious metals, which thus supply the money of the world at a greatly reduced cost of that prime measure of value, labor.

"We declare that the act of 1873 * * * has resulted in * * * a heavy increase in the burdens of taxation."

The increase in the burdens of federal taxation are mainly due to the increase in expenditures for pensions, public buildings and river and harbor improvements, and any party which would specifically declare against a continuation of these would quickly find itself repudiated by the people.

"We declare that the act of 1873 * * * has resulted in * * * a heavy increase in the burden of all debt, public and private."

The census figures show that the increase in debts since 1873 has been, in a very large share of the cases, for the purchase of homes or the improvement of farms, and that the sections in which this increase in mortgage indebtedness has been greatest, have shown as a result the greatest activity and the greatest increase in actual wealth and genuine prosperity.

"We declare that the act of 1873 * * * resulted in * * * the enrichment of the money lending class at home and abroad."

The money lending class can only "grow rich" by the interest which it receives for money loaned, and everybody knows that the rates of interest have greatly fallen since 1873 and that the opportunity for enrichment by this means must consequently have been correspondingly reduced. The usurious rates of interest which were possible in many section of the country prior to 1873 are now absolutely prohibited by State legislation.

"We declare that the act 1873 * * * resulted in * * * the prostration of industry and the improverishment of the people."

Industry was not "prostrated" or the people "impoverished" until the success of the Democratic party at the polls in 1892, and its free trade legislation which followed paralyzed industry in the United States and transformed its communities of busy workmen into idlers, thus bringing "prostration of industry and impoverishment of the people." There was never greater prosperity in the United States or any other country than that of the years immediately preceding the Democratic success of 1892, and never greater "prostration of industry and impoverishment of the people" than that which followed that Democratic success. It is because of the "prostration of industry and impoverishment of the people" through the operations of the Democratic party that its leaders now abandon their time-honored principles and ask restoration to power on a currency proposition which has been discarded by the most progressive nations of the world and is being rejected by others as rapidly as possible.

KLONDYKE.

Over the mountains and far away,
In the regions of ice and snow,
Many a pilgrim is trudging today
With a heart full of hope and shouting.
"Yo-ho
For Klondyke!"

Over the mountains, beyond the plains,
Where the great river winds to the sea,
Many a pioneer jingles his gains,
And sings in a frenzied ecstacy—
In Klondyke!

Thousands and thousands of miles away,
In the land of the polar bear,
Many a man is digging today,
Only to find that there's nothing there—
In Klondyke!

Many a husband, many a son,
And many a father, too;
Many a man who is dear to some one
Is climbing the glaciers, leading through To Klondyke!

Many a mother and many a wife
And many a one that is dear
Is dreaming today of a happier life
And hopefully waiting to hear
From Klondyke!

And thousands and thousands of golden hopes
And many a dream that is fair
Are destined to die on the frozen slopes
And find their graves out there
In Klondyke!

The Currency Question.

It may be said or the currency message that it merely requested congress to authorize a non-partisan commission of men well informed in finance for the consideration of a plan to simplify the currency. No legislation further was requested. The house passed a bill authorizing the commission, and the senate quietly pigeon holed it—as was expected. The status quo is not changed, therefore, only the views of the president are now of record, and if there had been any pledge to reform the currency, the president would have done his part to redeem the pledge. But there was no pledge to reform the system. The St. Louis platform declares that the currency of all kinds must be kept at parity with that which the commercial world receives at a fixed value the world over in settlement of balances. If that can be made to cover a change in the banking laws, then there was an implied pledge to reform the currency.

The president says that the soundness of the currency is nowhere questioned. Under our present system no loss can occur to the holders. In that respect we cannot improve the currency. But the system is costly to the government, and it entails some risks, because over four hundred millions of the volume is in the nature of a floating debt, which was incurred by a forced loan. This forced loan was to carry on the war for union, good in its time and justifiable, but not to be continued after the exigency that called it into being had passed. And, furthermore, no government should engage in the business of banking. The government should go out of that business. The national banks can furnish all of the credit money we need so long as we have silver certificates, and if given a fair show the banks will do it. But all taxes on currency issues should be abolished, for there is no profit in issuing notes otherwise.

At Last He Comes.

Hundreds of thousands of people are burning with impatience to learn more about Joseph Laude, formerly of Schuyler Falls, Clinton county, N. Y., but now of Dawson, Alaska.

In fact they want to know all about him. What does he look like and what kind of clothes does he wear? What does he eat for breakfast and what does he drink before or after or both? What were his antecedents: what his early experiences?

For Joseph Laude is the man who has long been awaited. Years ago, when a simple grocer or barber in Schuyler Falls, he made love to the daughter of rich and haughty parents. She was willing to be his'n; but her wealthy father interposed two large cold feet. Joseph went away and for many years nothing was heard from him. To-day he comes back—from Alaska—a millionaire miner,

Joseph has returned in that manner 100,000 times on the stage, but never before in the hard, practicle, every-day world, where the L. U. E. is any place from the court house to the railroad station.

But how did Joseph the Real come back? Was the wealthy papa's bank about to fail and he become a ruined, disgraced man, with twenty-seven indictments hanging over his bald head? Just at the opportune moment did Joseph come in the back door and say, in a deep, sad, bass voice: "I will give you the $600,000." Does he wear a large, new slouch hat and slap himself on the chest when he talks?

If it turns out that Joseph has red hair, or that he is inclined to be fat, or that he chews plug tobacco, or that in the midst of adversity he so far forgot what was due him as to leave off wearing a large diamond ring on the middle finger of the hand with which he despairingly clutched his last morsel of bread, then Joseph might as well not have come at all. He might as well have remained in the gold camp and married two squaws just as the rest of the real ones did.—Chicago News.

Farmers are Prosperous.

St. Marys, Kansas, Aug. 3, 1897.—This being a purely agricultural community there is nothing to report in the way of manufactures, but there can be no doubt of an advance in prosperity among the farmers, and, consequently, among the business men, who are dependent upon the farmers for their trade.

Summer Vacation.

Nearly every woman who can afford it takes a few week's rest during the hot season. Dressed in a cool gown, reclining in a hammock, walking in shady groves, cooled by ocean spray, resting on the greensward, she seeks recuperation to carry her through another year. But alas! how many women there are that can not afford to take this very much needed rest. Bound by domestic duties, or held a prisoner by office work, driven by necessity to shop or store the year round, because she can not spare a day's wages, she toils on without a vacation, tired, listless, spiritless, discouraged, back-ache, head-ache, trembling limbs, palpitating heart, poor appetite, flashes of heat, and cold, sleeplessness.

For such people, next to a vacation is Pe-ru-na. Pe-ru-na calms the nerves, quiets the mind, gives natural strength and new hope, brings restful sleep and regular appetite, and does all that can be done to mitigate the bad effects of overwork and want of a vacation.

The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio, are sending for a short time Dr. Hartman's latest work, written expressly for women. This book will be sent free to women only.

Dr. Swallow Preaches a Sermon.

PHILADELPHIA, August 1.—Rev. S.C Swallow, of Harrisburg, the prohibition candidate for state treasurer, preached tonight in the New York Street Methodist Episcopal church on "Man's Copartnership with God." Among other things he said:

"God's plan of goverment is theocracy, but man has sought out many inventions. Too indolent to attend to his part of the business, he has through the ages turned it over to kings, queens, despots and in these latter days to bosses, spelled with a big B. Of course, these latter are willing to attend to governmental affairs for the people for a percentage. Latterly the percentage has assumed such undue proportions to the business transacted as to impoverish the people and enrich the boss, corporations and trusts. It would be well for the people to take the reins and under the direction of the Divine Sovereign drive on to highest success.

Will Take Out Lumber.

Colonel E. A. Irvin, of Curwensville, and James L. Leavy and James Mitchell, of Clearfield, are about to build a branch railroad from the Beech Creek railroad, near Mahaffey, to Curry and Irish runs, to take out lumber and bark and develop the minerals in that locality. It is estimated that 125,000,000 feet of logs and 60,000 cords of bark can be freighted at this point from the lands through which the road and branches will pass. It is thought that the road will cost $20,000 or $30,000, and will be strictly a private enterprise.

A LOCAL SMITHY.

Lays Aside His Hammer and Tong to Discuss What to Him was a New Discovery.

If this discovery was unearthed by a blacksmith in Boston, Buffalo or Bradford we would not ask our readers to believe it, but when the mechanic is in Bellefonte there is no getting away from the truth. You can find Mr. Chas. Shearer at No. 23 Thomas street where, between the rings of his anvil, he will corroborate personally what is here made public. Mr. Shearer says:

"The trouble in my back started from a strain I received while shoeing a horse that was rather hard to handle. I have taken a number of kidney remedies and I have been treated by a number of physicians who told me my kidneys were out of gear, but they could do nothing for me. Besides being troubled with severe backaches the urine was very dark and I had severe headaches.

I know they originated from my kidneys, for since I used Doan's Kidney Pills they have stopped. I saw a number of accounts of remarkable cures made by the old Quaker remedy and although I did not know any of the people I concluded to try them as sort of a venture. I sent to the Pharmacy of F. Potts Green for a box and commenced use them. Colds used to effect me. I have contracted one since I ceased using them and notice no inconvenience. I have also done a great deal of horse shoeing and other heavy work since, but my back has stood the test all right. I can heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

The readers of the Gazette will remember reading an account, in last week's edition, of a musical picnic attended by the local scribe and his best girl, in which special mention was made of the great eye he has for pretty girls and the wonderfully capacious stomach he has for a picnic dinner. After the picnic the young man and his lady friend drove to Unionville where they took supper. Did the horse get any supper? well I guess not, he was tied to a post in front of the house while the reporter dined within. What made matters worse was that the horse stood where he could hear his master munch his food, smack his lips and every now and then daintily sip some tea. Tears stood in the poor horse's eyes as he thought of his home far away, and he wondered when this life's troubles would end. Several kind hearted young ladies vainly endeavored to comfort the poor beast, and one offered him an apple. Several of the young ladies have spoken of the poor horse, and one assured the writer that the poor animal stood so long and listened so intently to catch the sound of his master's footsteps that his ears grew until he looked like a little mule.

After this Francis when you wish to take (Miles) miles feed your horse.

Miss Nora Stover of Bellefonte visited friends in our town last week.

THE EVANGELISTS.

Meeting With Great Success in Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia Times Friday published the following interesting article about the work in that city of Evangelists Weaver and Weeden:

Success in soul saving has for the past eight weeks crowned the efforts of Rev. Leonard Weaver, the evangelist, and W. S. Weeden, the evangelist singer, who, with united forces, have for that length of time been earnestly laboring day and night in their Gospel tabernacle at Broad and Tioga streets. At least one hundred persons have expressed themselves as being converted, many others have formed intentions to pursue better lives, while many thousands have been given the opportunity and have seized upon it of listening to the message of salvation.

But the success here, while it has not been small, can in no way compare with the results of the revival conducted by these same gentlemen at Bellefonte and Lock Haven last fall and spring. Then hundreds became converted. That revival attracted the attention of the entire community.

Although loath to leave this rich field, Rev. Weaver desired to work in Philadelphia, his native city, for he thought that much good could be accomplished, so the big tabernacle was brought here and located where it is now standing.

It is a monstrous affair. Fist there is a big skeleton structure, resembling somewhat in appearance three sides of a truncated pyramid. Its length is 135 feet, its breadth 85 feet. In its construction 15,000 feet of lumber was required.

Over this framework is spread yard after yard of tent canvas. Underneath are the seats, the lights and the pulpit. This is the famous Weaver Gospel tabernacle.

Here every night and twice each Sunday the evangelists have preached and sung to 3,000, and often 4,000, people who have gathered to hear them. Scarcely has a service passed when the seats were not filled and many had to stand in the aisles or just outside the entrances, in order to be a part of the interested congregations.

Success has undoubtedly attended the evangelists' labors, but during the few days they are yet to be here, before going to Ocean City to take charge of the Methodist camp meeting there, Mr. Weaver and his associates have determined to put forth every effort to bring about more fruitful results, to endeavor to garner well the field, so that no stray sheaf shall be left.

Hence there are to be several innovations instituted, which, in the minds of their originators, will be a great help in the work of soul-saving.

First, and above all, Fanny J. Crosby, the distinguished blind hymn writer, will be at the tabernacle on Sunday and Monday, and according to Mr. Weaver, for many years her devoted friend, "to see the soul shining in her face is enough to make the sinner repent." During Sunday evening service she will give a short talk. Monday evening will be known as "Fanny Crosby night." Every hymn sung will be chosen from those written by Miss Crosby, and as each one is announced she will tell to the congregation the incident or thought which inspired it.

The revival will end two Sundays hence.

COURT PROCLAMATION—Whereas the Honorable J. G. Love, President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of the 49th Judicial District, consisting of the county of Centre, and the Honorable Corlis Faulkner, Associate Judge in and for Centre county, having issued their precept, bearing date of 1st day of January, 1897, to me directed for holding a Court of Common Pleas and Orphans' Court, Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery and Quarter Sessions of the Peace in Bellefonte, for the County of Centre and to commence on the 4th Monday of August, being the 23rd day of August, 1897, and to continue one weeks. Notice is hereby given to the coroner, justice of the peace, aldermen and constables of said County of Centre, that they be then and there in their proper persons, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of the 23rd, with their records, inquisitions, examinations, and their own remembrances to do those things which to their office appertains to be done, and those who are bound in recognizances to prosecute against the prisoners that are or shall be in the jail of Centre county be then and there to prosecute against them as shall be just,

Notice is also hereby given and by virtue the precept of the Judges aforesaid, issued as aforesaid, there will be held a regular court of Common Pleas, for the trial of civil cases, beginning on Monday, August 23rd, 1897 at 10 o'clock, upon which all persons summoned as jurors are required to attend.

DISPOSED OF IMPORTANT BILLS

Turned the Vote Ax on the Mercantile Tax Measure and Also on the Simon Electric Light Bill.

SOME OF THE REASONS GIVEN

HARRISBURG, July 30.—Governor Hastings cleared his desk this afternoon of the remaining six bills left with him by the legislature and then started on an overland trip to Bellefonte.

The mercantile tax measure, several items in the general appropriation bill and the Simon electric light and "Bird day" bills were disapproved and the appropriation of $100,000 to Jefferson Medical college, Philadelphia, and the liquor license bill were signed.

Governor Hastings says in his veto of the mercantile tax bill that it would receive his approval were it not for the fact that the constitutionalty of the proposed enactment is more than doubtful; that if permitted to become a law it would be unjust and unfair to a large class of merchants and that ultimately it would prove detrimental to the best interests of the state. "For several years the business depression has been so great that almost every industry has struggled to exist," he concludes, "and I am unwilling to impose further burdens upon these interests for the reasons that I have stated. I therefore withhold my approval from this bill."

In disapproving the Simon bill the Executive says he "cannot agree to impose upon the municipalities of this Commonwealth the burden of paying by taxation for all the electric light plants that may be in operation in the municipalities respectively as a condition precedent to the exercise of the function of municipal lighting." He also states that he is not convinced by the arguments made in favor of the measure looking to the interests of all the cities and boroughs of the state that it should receive Executive approval and that he can see no reason for departing from the position taken upon the bill of similar import which failed to receive his approval at the session of 1895.

The following items in the general appropriation bill are disapproved: One thousand eight hundred dollars for a night watchman in the state department, $1,200 for the attorney general as a member of the board of public accounts at the request of Attorney General McCormick, the item having been inserted without his knowledge; $3,000 for the superintendent of the bureau of railways; $1,800 for an elevotor man in the capitol; $25,000 for the construction of a new quarantine boat for the health officer of Philadelphia; $3,000 in favor of William K. Taylor, crier, and John T. Comley, Samuel Collins and Daniel Ahern, tipstaves, for service rendered the superior court during 1897; $800 for the janitor of the apartments of lieutenant-governor; $1,650 for the engineer of the capitol and $1,650 for the cellar fireman of the senate; 1,000 to pay Lucius Rogers, of Kane, clerk of the senate appropriations committee; the item of $3 a day for a house watchman and the pages, a total of $11,293,60 so far as it relates to the watchman; $1,650 for a cellar fireman; $500 for Henry Huhn, of Philadelphia, clerk to the house rules committee; $200 for John Horner, Harrisbnrg, janitor of the supreme court rooms; $1,650 for Josiah Higgings, of Harrisburg, for keeping in order the bathroom in the executive building; $2,150 to H. I. Goodman for service on the committee to ascertain the number of alien paupers quartered upon the state; $5,000 for the expenses of the committee to ascertain the best methods of utilizing convict labor in state institutions; $350 to purchase a portrait of Thaddeus Stevens; $401.50 for the funeral expenses of ex-Representative William H. Cassin, of Philadelphia, and $625.50 for the funeral expenses of the late ex-Representative D. D. Phillips, of Schuylkill; $3,234-80 for the clerical assistance and stenographic work for the state treasury investigating committee; $450.80 to Charles Ettla and a like amount to George Baker for car fare and services as secretary and doorkeeper for the penitentiary investigating committee; $60 for Jacob Kepler, of Centre county, for taxes alleged to have been improperly assessed; $1,000 to pay expenses of delegates of the coast defense congress which met in Tampa, Fla., last January; regarding the appropriation for the state normal schools the governor signs the appropriations, the thirteen schools sharing in the appropriation having filed with the state treasurer an abatement of $5,000 each.

The governor knocks $9,450 off the $45,256 for the pay of the officers and salaries of the officers and employes of the house and $15,434 off the item of $73,404 for salaries of employes of the house. The executive says:

"The amounts approved represent the salaries of the officers and employes of the senate and house of representatives authorized by law, and the amount disapproved represents the salaries of such officers and employes as are not provided for by any act of assembly."

All other items in the bill are approved.

Gave Public Hearings.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 20.—Governor Hastings gave public hearings yesterday on bills appropriating $200,000 to the Lehigh University and $5,000 to the Rush Hospital for Consumptives, Philadelphia. The State Game Commission appeared in behalf of the Baldwin bill creating the office of game and fish warden at a salary of $1,200 a year. The State Fish Commission opposed the bill.

The Governor asked the commissioners if it could get along the next two years with $25,000, the legislature having neglected to make the annual appropriation of $17,500 a year for its support. The commissioners replied in the affirmative, and the Governor agreed to raise this amount by private subscription, with the understanding that the subscribers shall be reimbursed by the next legislature. Governor Hastings and Attorney General McCormick will each contribute $500.

Bryan Going to Mexico.

From the Pittsburg Times.

According to all reports William Jennings Bryan is doing a powerful lot of studying these days. He was reported a short time ago to be contemplating a tour around the world in order that he might store his mind with facts tending to convince his fellow citizens that their salvation lays in 50 cent dollars. Now it is said that he will go to Mexico in order to study and report upon the blessings which the free coinage o silver have conferred upon the people of that country. We do not know how that country will appear to Bryan's eyes, but it is certain that if he goes there he will find the part of the continent which was first colonized by Europeans nearly at the tail end of the procession. He will find a country richly endowed by nature, whose development lags a century or more behind the recently settled territory to the north of it. He will find the lowest wages ever paid in this country of the gold bugs princely compared with what are deemed sufficient there.

He may come back with some sophistical argument to persuade the American workmen that free silver in Mexico is making of that country a paradise, and may be able to show that, because the wages there are 25 cents a day or less, the adoption of the same system of currency here will cause the workers to live in luxury, but he will not succeed in making any sane persons believe it. For, aside from the general knowledge of the subject possessed by every intelligent man, it will be remembered that the workingmen themselves during the last campaign sent their representatives to Mexico and that they reported a condition of affairs that by no means caused those whom they represented to hanker after Mexican conditions. In fact, all through the contest Mexico was a source of weakness. It was too near home and too well known to escape attention, and the conditions there, coupled with the forced admission of Bryan that his scheme would at least temporarily reduce wages, was the cause of the overwhelming majority against him in all the industrial centres of the ountry.

Cure Chickens From Scratching.

When any of your neighbor's chickens scratch up your garden or your flower beds or otherwise annoy you, here is a remedy that will cure them every time:

Procure a lot of stiff cards about 1x2 inches, write on the cards, 'Please keep your chickens at home;' tie a short string to each card with a grain of corn at the other end of the string and scatter these in the place where the chickens congregate. When the hungry biddy gobbles up the grain that draws the prize she follows up the string, stowing it away until she comes to the card, which, of course, she can't swallow. Then you will see her pull out for home carrying in her mouth the card bearing your polite request.

Unjust Abuse of England in India.

In view of the abuse that is being levied by certain American magazines and newspapers against the English people for having spent so much money in celebrating the jubilee of the queen while so many of their fellow-subjects in India were starving, it may be as well to call attention to the fact that a fund of nearly $10,000,000 for the relief of the sufferers by the Indian famine has been raised by popular subscription in the British dominions. Of this sum $3,000,000 was raised in London alone. The government itself has devoted an immense sum toward the same purpose by means of so-called relief public works and in connection with the distribution of food, over 4,000,000 natives being at the present moment supported and maintained without any returned to the ritish administration.

SOME SIGNED BILLS.

THE MEASURES LOOKED OVER

Reasons Given By the Executive for Putting On the Provision Left Him Under the State Constitution, Etc., Etc.

GOES AWAY FOR A MONTH'S REST

HARRISBURG, July 29.—Governor Hastings to-night disposed of all the expense bills of the various legislative investigating committees. In nearly every case he disapproves the items in favor of members for "sleeping berths, parlor and dining car charges. carriage hire, mileage, telegraph and telephone messages, preparing reports, clerk hire and personal expenses."

The Governor says it has been the practice for many years to allow mileage to legislative committees and in withholding his approval from these items he deems it proper to state that no reflection upon the character of the members can be fairy implied because of these appropriations. He claims the constitution forbids the payment of mileage to the members of such committees and that the only mileage to which a member of the legislature is entitled is that provided in the act of July 7, 1885. He also states that to allow compensation to legislators for preparing reports of committees would be in plain violation of the constitution.

The Executive recommends in his message disapproving the expenses of the committee to investigate the condition of the miners in the anthracite coal region that an act of assembly be passed governing the fees charged by stenographers for service to legislative committees, the fees and mileage of the sergeant-at-arms in performing service for committees.

Governor Hastings disapproves all the items in the bill of the oleo investigating committee except for the compensation of Chairman Hosack, of Pittsburg, and Senator Critchfield, of Somerset, and the bills of the Hotel Duquesne, Pittsburg, and Attorney James F. Burke, of Pittsburg.

He disapproves the individual expenses of the members of the anthracite and bituminous investigating committees, the insurance scandal and penitentiary committees and the elections committees in investigating the Shiffer-Leh contest from Northampton county, and the Saunders-Roberts contest from the Third Philadelphia district. The various bills in favor of Sergeant-at-arms Wyatt, of the House, for services on the elections and investigating committees, and arranging for the attendance of the legislature at McKinley's inauguration, are disapproved. The items in the insurance scandal investigating bills in favor of the stenographer are vetoed because they are excessive.

Bills appropriating $2,000 for the pay of counsel fees in the Shiffer-Leh and Saunders-Roberts contests are approved. The Executive also approves bills appropriating $16,000 to pay the expenses of the Heller-Laubach senatorial contest from Northampton county, and $200,000 to the University of Pennsylvania. The bill called for an appropriation of $250,000, as follows: Fifty thousand for the Maternity hospital, $100,000 for general maintenance, $50,000 for general expenses, $50,000 for general educational purposes. The Governor withholds his approval from the last item. He also disapproves the people's bill making a uniform fish law, the measure creating the office of fish and game warden at a salary of $1,200 a year, and the Roberts bill to provide for the more safe and efficient means of exit from theatres and other places of public amusement hereafter constructed where stage scenery and apparatus are employed.

Governor Hastings will start tomorrow on an overland trip to Bellefonte, where he expects to spend a month resting from the labors of the legislative session. Attorney General McCormick, who has aided the Executive in disposing of the bills left with him by the legislature, will also leave to-morrow. He will go to his home at Williamsport and will not return to the state capital before the middle of August.

The Governor will to-morrow announce his action on the six bills remaining on his desk. They are the general apppropriation; Simon electric light, bird day bills; the appropriation for Jefferson Medical college, Philadelphia, and the mercantile tax and liquor measures.

City Election in Boise, Idaho.

The largest election in Idaho since women were enfranchised last November, was held in Boise, the capital on July 13th. The contest hinged on the question of having or not having reasonable city improvements. Among other things, the city has never compelled property owners to put down sidewalks. The "improvement" candidate for mayor was Mr. Alexander, a man of moderate means, good reputation and a Jew. The opposing candidate was Mr. Sonna, a man of wealth and thoroughly respected. As Mr. Sonna is interested in temperance and church affairs, it was predicted that the vote of the women would be for him. But the majority of the women recorded their belief in city improvements and Mr. Alexander and a progressive council were elected by a much larger plurality than had been hoped for. Mrs. Carrie E. Myers was elected City Collector, and there was a tie for City Clerk between Miss McCrea and Mr. Blake.

Two years ago the total vote was 85.9, per cent of the registration; this year it was 89.7 per cent of their registration The women's vote was 87.7 per cent of their registration. Two women were employed in each ward as distributing and enrolling clerks. The Idaho Daily Statesman said: "The election was remarkable for its orderliness. There were no unpleasant incidents at any of the polls and everything passed off pleasantly, the entrance of women into active participation in politics being a most pronounced success." Ex-Congressman Edgar Wilson said, "The women have done nobly!"

The following is from an editorial in the "Sentiniel"—"The women of Boise have fully demonstrated their fitness for the right of suffrage. They have manifested a deep interest in the issues of the campaign and their ballots showed just as much knowledge of the correct way of voting as has ever been manifested by men."

The August McCLURE'S is issued as a special Midsummer Fiction Number, and without ignoring serious interests, it justifies its title in an eminent and most entertaining degree. A complete novelette by Rudyard Kipling, dealing with school life in England and army life in India, and obviously written straight and hot from the author's own personal experience, would alone, especially with its admirable illustrations, make the number distinguished. But there are four or five shorter stories—stories by Conan Doyle, Robert Barr, John Keddrick Bangs, and others, each more or less novel and enticing in incident and interest, and most of them also attractively illustrated.

This number is also notable for many other very interesting features in poetry and prose all beautifully illustrated.

A Happy Return.

Many amusing stories are told connected with duelling. One has recently been told in which an English peer and a politician figured, and we venture to repeat it because we think it worth preserving. The peer, for some offense, was called out by the politician, and promptly responded to the challenge. On arriving at home again after the duel his lordship gave a guinea to the coachman who had driven him to and from the ground. The driver appears to have been an exceptionally honest, simple man. He was surprised by the largeness of the sum presented, and said, "My lord, I only took you too——." "Yes, yes; I know that. But the guinea is for bringing me back; not for taking me out. I enjoyed the drive home very much, but not the drive out. That is what I pay you for."

Trade Increasing 50 per Cent.

ROCKFORD, Wash., July 30, 1897.—Both the manufacturing and agricultural interests of this section show marked improvement. The sawmills, which had nearly all suspended work last summer, are running full time. A new box factory has been established and put into operation, giving employment to a large number of hands, and the chief flouring mill of the place has added largely to its machinery capacity. Merchants report an increase of 50 per cent. in their trade, and sales and collections being materially improved. All farm products have advanced in price, and farmers are building new houses and barns, something not witnessed in the past four years.

Andree's Forebodings.

Æronaut Andree himself appeared to take a very desperate view of his balloon trip over the Arctic realm, according to the latest information concerning him. The special correspondent of the Berlin Lokalanzieger, who spent four weeks with the intrepid Swede on Danes Island, and who witnessed his ascent on his perilous flight, asserts that the balloonist frequently referred in an ominous way to the dangers of his enterprise, and declared that it would be necessary to throw even his provisions overboard in case of an emergency. This remark opens up a new vista of terrible speculation.

Andree himself had no dread of the possible bursting of his balloon, and his preparations took into full consideration the question of cold. But from a number of reasons there was need to fear that a necessity might arise which would call for the lightening of the air ship of all its ballast. Should everything else turn out as fortunately as Andree had hoped and planned, there would still be constant danger from gales, long periods of rain and, at the very start, from the high cliffs. No wonder dark forebodings seized his mind as the fateful hour drew nigh! To-day Andree and his two companions may still be afloat above the silent, far-stretching waters of the Arctic sea, their baloon intact and drifting, but they themselves without food and starving to death! Of course, in some cases, they would prefer to sink to the sea or earth beneath, provided as they are with a collapsible boat; but there are emergencies in which they would be obliged to make every sacrifice in order to keep in mid-air.

Many unknown perils have these daring explorers braved; and it would be little short of a miracle if they should ever be heard from more.—Phila. Record.

Moving to Lima, Ohio.

It is with regret that we note the fact that Mrs. Mary A. Mitchell, widow of the late Ira C. Mitchell, Esq., and her children, Miss Lizzie McKibben, Charity, Johnand James Mitchell, moved on Friday to Lima, Ohio, where they expect to make their future home. Mrs. Mitchell and son, Charles McKibben, and her daughter Mrs P. A. Khale, reside in that city.

The departure of Mrs. Mitchell and her family is sincerely regretted by all, for by their bright and gracious ways, they have endeared themselves to many people in this community. The sympathy of our people went out to them in their recent affliction, and it is the wish of all, that their future may be bright and happy, for while there are dark clouds still, sunshine will come again.

One of two Ways.

The bladder was created for one purpose, namely, a receptacle for the urine and as such it is not liable to any form o disease except by one of two ways. The first way is from imperfect action of the kidneys. The second way is from careless local treatment of other diseases.

CHIEF CAUSE.

Unhealthy urine from unhealthy kidneys is the chief cause of bladder troubles. So the womb, like the bladder, was created for one purpose, and if not doctored too much is not liable to weakness or disease, except in rare cases. It is situated back of and very close to the bladder, therefore any pain, disease or inconvenience manifested in the kidneys, back, bladder or urinary passage is often, by mistake, attruted to female weakness or womb trouble of some sort. The error is easily made and may be as easily avoided. To find out correctly, set your urine aside for twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates kidney or bladder trouble. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, and bladder remedy is soon realized. If you need a medicine you should have the best. At druggists fifty cents and one dollar. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet, both sent free by mail. Mention this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghampton N. BUSINESS MEN'S PICNIC.

A Fine Program Arranged to be Carried Out That Day.

WHAT WE WILL DO AND SEE

The General Committees Come Together—Make Reports and Decide How the Day Will be Spent on August 12th.

AMUSEMENTS GALORE FOR OUR OUTING

Members of the various committees, appointed to perfect arrangements for the business men's picnic met at the large pavilion at Hecla park Tuesday evening July 27th. Upwards of forty gentlemen were present, Bellefonte, Mackeyville, Cedar Springs, Mill Hall, Flemington Lock Haven and Jersey Shore being represented.

The first matter disposed of was the report of Chairman Rittman, to the effect that he had appointed a committee of Jersey Shore citizens to make arrangements for joining in the picnic. His action was ratified by a unanimous vote.

The committee from Jersey Shore consists of W. D. Masters, M. I. Sallada, B. F. Harlan and James Morrow. The first three named gentlemen were present. Mr. Masters reported that fifty-three of their business men had signed the petition to close their establishments on the day of the picnic, and stated that the remaining twelve or fifteen would likely do likewise when the petition would be presented to them.

William Conley, of Bellefonte, reported that he had three entries for the foot race, seven for the swimming and five for the tub race.

The committees on base ball and fireworks reported progress.

W. O. Bentley, of Lock Haven, reported that he had assurances that two bands will attend the picnic and probably will secure two or three more. Arrangements will probably be made to have the Jersey Shore bands attend also.

Torrence Shearer, of the printing committee, reported that the large posters and the placards has been printed as ordered.

S. Spigelmeyer, of Bellefonte, reported that all the business house of that place will be closed on the day of the picnic. Mr. Loder, of this city, stated that he had received assurances from the large majority of our merchants to close. He also stated that letters had been sent to all merchants in towns in Nittany valley to do likewise.

L. R. Morrison, of this city, reported that for the trap shooting contest the four gentlemen from Clinton county will be Barton Pardee, J. C. Merrill, James Keller and Charles Kiger.

T. A. Shoemaker, of Bellefonte, reported that the colored people of that place were already practicing to take part in the cake walk.

There were some changes made in the program for the bicycle races which were adopted. The program of which was published in our last issue.

ATE LUNCHEON.

The meeting then adjourned to another building where members of the Lock Haven committee had thoughtfully prepared a luncheon. The visitors partook of the repast with the avidity of hungry men. The thanks of all were heartily extended to Messrs. S. Z. Martin, Walter Lawrence, B. F. Brown and W. F. Elliot. After the luncheon many of the gentlemen repaired to the McMullen residence, which is now being transformed into a large and desirable club house, a description of which improvements was given in these columns a few days ago.

The courtesies of the Central railroad were extended all the committeemen by Mr. Warfield, the obliging general manager of the road.—Lock Haven Democrat.

—The Pennsylvania State College foot ball team will train at Hecla Park the first two weeks in September. The boys will have use of the new country club house there and in return will play a foot ball game at the Park during the season. It will probably be the game with the Carlisle Indians.

Fortune's Favors.

Seldom does fortune furnish so many favors to any country in a single season as it brings to the United States at the present time. A shortage in the wheat crop of the rest of the world is accompanied by a large increase in the yield in this country, and a consequent expansion in exportation, which is already beginning to test the facilities of the steamship companies. Not only has the American farmer more wheat to sell than he had last year, but a market for it is provided for him at fair prices. The gold holdings of the treasury and the banks are increasing, the silver folly is discredited, and now comes the enactment of the new tariff to remove the last vestige of financial uncertainty and usher in an era of business activity which will rival the happiest period of the past. Once more the Republican Party has proven itself the greatest political organization in constructive ability which the nation has known. Another Republican promise has been grandly performed, and the prosperity which has been absent for many years will soon be restored to the country.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Is Life Worth Living.

If there is an individual on earth who is excusable for thus interrogating himself, it is the unhappy mortal who suffers from malaria in some one of its diabolical forms. This is no difficult conundrum, however. Life is worth living by any man or woman who enjoys good health, and is not harrassed by a reproachful conscience. The malarial scourge, heavily laid on, is a terrible one for the poor sufferer to endure. A series of freezings, scorchings and sweats—the last leaving one as limp and as streugthless as a dish rag, are hard indeed, recurring as they do fiendish regularity. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the world-wide known preventive and curative of this class of maladies, either in the form of fever and ague, bilious remittent, dumb ague and ague cake. Used with persistence, they will, rely upon it, eradicate disease from the system. They also conquor rheumatism, kidney and bladder complaints, nervousness, dyspepsia, liver complaint, and constipation, and renew failing strength.

Why a Boy was Good Fifty Years Ago.

Assistant Marshal Wright amused himself the other day with watching a small boy, who thought he was unobserved, try to let the wind out of a bicycle standing in front of the Western Union office. He unscrewed the cap from the valve and then glanced about to see if any one was looking; then he squeezed the tire, put his knee on it, and tried various means to get the air out, looking, mean-while, to see if the owner was coming. He finally had to give it up. Mr. Wright said to ex Marshal Hendrick:

"Talk about bad boys, they wouldn't have done that fifty years ago."

Mr. Hendrick, evidently a believer in the boy of to-day, answered:

"Oh, no; they didn't have bicycles fifty years ago."—Springfield Republican.

Business Reviving.

PASSAIC, N. J., July 30.—1897, There is a marked increase in the number of people employed in the manufacturing establishments here, the number being now probably two-thirds more than a year ago The botany Worsted Mills, which ran only on part time last year, are now in full operation and enlarging their plant. The Manhattan Satinet Works are in full operation after three years' idleness. The Dundee Woolen Company, which was idle most of the time during the past four years, is running so full capacity and on full time, Many of the mills are running over time.

No Lack of Employment Now.

DUNSEITH, N. DAKOTA, July 30.—1897. There are no manufactures in this town or vicinity, but the evidences of improved conditions in the town and among the farmers are unmistakable. Considerable b ilding is in progress among the farmers, and they are receiving good prices for their good crops. There is no lack of employment for men now, although there were many unemployed a year ago. In this vicinity there is a marked activity in the erection of business and residences structures.

Explained.

"See here, young man, I'll have to take you in. Your lantern's out."

"Hold on, officer, I'll explain. You see I bought one of these $2-bicycle suits this afternoon, and it burst on me ten mile from home. Now, I'm trying to get back as quietly as I can in the dark. You see the necessity of it?"

"That's all right—go ahead."

DEATH OF DR. SAMUEL E. NOLL.

A Bright and Promising Career Brought to an Untimely Close.

The sad news which reached Bellefonte Wednesday afternoon of the death of Dr. Samuel Edward Noll, at the Medico-Chiurgical hospital in Philadelphia, was a terrible shock to the many friends and relatives of this promising young man. His illness dates back about eight weeks and was caused by the bile ducts closing up, causing jaundice. Then an abcess formed in the intestines next to the liver, and it was decided to take him to the hospital at Philadelphia and have an operation performed. He left for that city Monday morning, accompanied by his brother, J. A. Noll, of Pleasant Gap. He seemed to stand the journey all right and great hopes were entertained that he would go through the operation all right. But he suffered a relapse Wednesday and the abcess broke, causing his death at 2 p. m., within a half hour after it broke. His remains were brought to Bellefonte on the 9 o'clock train Thursday morning and taken to his mother's home, near Pleasant Gap.

Samuel Edward Noll was born at Pleasant Gap, Centre county, August 18, 1868, and at the time of his death was 28 years, 11 months and 10 days old. He was a son of William H. Noll, now deceased, and Emeline Noll, now residing on the old homestead near Pleasant Gap. He graduated from the Lock Haven Normal school; then took a year's course at the State College, after which he entered the Medico-Chiurgical college, graduating in May, 1895. After this he was admitted to Chiurgical hospital, where he practiced for one year. He was now a full-fledged M. D., and ready to practice. On looking around for a location he at first decided on his old home at the Gap, coming back there and practicing for about four months. As most of his practice came from Bellefonte he finally decided to locate here and did so, opening up an office opposite the Court House about October 1, 1896. Here he was fast building up a lucrative practice and had won the confidence and esteem of all who came in contact with him either professionally or otherwise. The Doctor was admitted to the Centre County Medical Association, January 5th 1896. This was quite an honor as they are usually compelled to practise a year before being admitted.

Dr Noll is survived by his mother, Mrs Emaline Noll and five brothers and one sister namely: Wm. H., Jeremiah A., James C., John F., Boyd A. and Ethel E., all, of whom reside at Pleasant Gap.

The deceased was a member of Knights of Golden Eagle, Heptasophs and the Royal Arcanum. The funeral took place Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock from the house at Pleasant Gap. The services were conducted by Rev. R. L. Gearhart of the Reformed church. Interment at Zion in the old family burying ground in the Zion cemetery.

Statue of Patrick Henry in a Show Window.

Monongalia county is the owner of a statue of Patrick Henry, which for forty years mutely challenged the attention and great respect of her people from its honorable position on top of the old county court house. But when a new temple of justice was erected on the site of the old, a few years ago, Patrick fell from his high estate and the name of his marble image was mud. To-day the statue stands in a Morgantown shop window as an advertisement. The Monongalian calls the attention of the county court to the fact, and characterizes the abandonment and dishonor of the statue of the great Virginian as a shame and disgrace to Monongallia county.

Carnegie's Last Offer.

EDINBURGH, July 29.—Andrew Carnegie has offered to the town of Stirling, the seat of the palace and parliament house, built by James V., the sum of $6,000 for a public library building.

One of Napoleon's Ruses.

In order to induce the great public to buy their tobacco ingenious Yankee manufacturers in the past frequently resorted to the plan of packing in money with their packages of tobacco. This scheme is not new, however, and none less than Napoleon I is said to have originated a similar idea. When he first introduced the five franc coins it was found that the people did not take readily to the innovation, and in some cases acceptance of these coins was refused. To overcome this antipathy the great Corsican, who knew the human character well, gave out that in one of these coins there would be hidden a small piece of asbestos with an order upon the Bank of France for 100,000 francs ($20,000). Ever since the demand for these coins is great, and they are but seldom returned to the treasury in any other way but cut in half. Although no one has ever found the asbestos fortune, several thousand of the five franc coins from the first decade of this century are annually mutilated in this way.

The writing of the order and the imbedding of it in a coin is said to have taken place in the presence of Napoleon Bonaparte, and a fund was set aside by the Bank of France to honor it should it be produced, but it has not materialized as yet.—Philadelphia Record.

Great Britain's Navy.

The naval estimates submitted to the British parliament yesterday increase the cost of the new naval establishment at Dover from $10,000,000 to $17,500,000 in addition to strengthening and extending the existing naval works all over the world.

The expenditure of so vast a sum of money at a single point is something which the American mind finds difficulty in grasping. But in maintaining the mastery of the sea Great Britain is not afraid of spending money. In the last year's budget the net naval estimate was £21,823,000, or, in round numbers, $109,000,000. For the various items grouped under the head of new construction—that is, for the cost of new vessels—the total amount is £10,871,000, or more than $54,000,000.

Great Britain is able to do this because parliament furnishes the government with adequate revenue through intelligent legislation. We may add that public opinion indorses these gigantic appropriations because it knows that no private ring of armor-plate speculators dominates the naval management of the country.

Broke Into Stations.

Robbers broke into the stations of the Beech Creek and Bald Eagle valley railroads at Mill Hall Tuesday night. They effected entrance through the windows. At the Beech Creek station they only secured a few shirts, but they had broken open all the packages of shoes and other merchandise. At the Bald Eagle valley station nothing was missing except several plugs of tobacco. The robbers had also broken open all the packages in the ware house and the ticket case.

The burglars are believed to be those who robbed the station at Port Matilda and Julian a few nights ago and also at Curtin Monday night. A watchman had been stationed at the station at Beech Creek, but that place was skipped by the robbers.—L. H. Democrat.

Remarkable Women.

Thomas—You and I have remrkable wives.

Harkins—Do you think so?

Thomas—Yes. You know when my wife and I were at your house night before last? well, my wife had on a new dress and she and your wife talked about it nearly all the evening.

Harkins—I don't see anything remarkable about that. It was the natural thing for them to do.

Thomas—But, hold on! Your wife didn't ask who made it, and my wife didn,t tell! Cleveland Leader.

MAILING LETTERS.

To Business Men in Centre and Clinton Counties.

Thursday evening the committee to solicit business men to close their establishments on the day of the picnic at Hecla Park, mailed the following letter to every business man in Centre and Clinton counties:

The universal satisfaction as the result of closing the stores all day for the Business Men's picnic at Hecla Park last year by the merchants of Lock Haven and Bellefonte, and their willingness to do the same again this year, has led us to believe that the stores and places of business all over both counties should be invited to close on that day, in order that all business men and those in their employ may have the opportunity to enjoy the advantages of so rare an occasion for acquaintance and fellowship.

We extend the invitation. Advertise that you will close by telling your friends and customers and invite them to go along.

The picnic will be held at Hecla Park, Thursday, August 12th. If rainy on Thursday, then Friday will be the day.

The program for the day will be outlined in the newspapers and elsewhere.

The business people of Jersey Shore have been invited and are likely to join.

Let everyone in Centre and Clinton counties fall into line and join in making this a day of mutual benefit to employer and employes, that, while the "day off" in the woods, the games and amusements are enjoyed, all may be helped by the social intercourse and exchange of ideas.

Avail yourself of the opportunity, advertise your business and make a few more friends and acquaintances.

A Tobacco Advertisement.

PHILADELPHIA, July 29.—While unpacking a case of Havana leaf this afternoon an employe of the firm of Vetterlein Brothers discovered the following letter upon a single sheet of note paper: "Havana, April 4, 1896. To Whom it May Concern—There is in Moro Castle three American men that were captured in Rio Del Pinar. They are not allowed to communicate to any one to apply for relief from the United States government. I take this means to notify persons in the states for them. They have papers for honorable discharge from the army in 1865. They give their homes as Germantown, Philadelphia. The men were on a tour of Cook's excursion.

"ANNIO LUCI, Havana."

The cargo of tobacco, of which the message-laden case was a part, arrived at this port on the steamer Seneca from Havana, on April 10, 1896. It laid in the bonded warehouse until the latter part of last March, when the beginning of the tariff excitement caused a number of tobacco men to take out goods consigned to them.

Since that time the case had been standing in Vetterlein's store unopened. The letter was forwarded to the state department at Washington.

Rifle Shot Killed Him.

Friday morning James Foreman, of South Williamsport, was instantly killed. He with his nephew was picking berries in a line direct with and about 200 yards from the target at the rifle range. From whose rifle the shot came is not definitely known; as there were several men practicing. The shot that did the deadly work entered Foreman's forehead above the right eye and came out of the back part of his head, When his uncle dropped the nephew ran to the range and informed the men of the accident. The body was taken to the undertaker's rooms, where an inquest will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Deceased had a wife and two stepchildren. The shooting was purely accidental.—L. H. Democrat.

A Congress of Young Blood.

Never in the history of this country have there been so many young men chosen as representatives of the people in congress as were elected to the present house. It is emphatically a congress of young men, as the most casual observer from the galleries will readily note. That these men had to contend for their nomination and election against veteran politicians of ability and experience is pleasing proof that to people realize talent and statesmanlike qualities wherever found and that it is no longer necessary for one to have wrinkles and hoary locks before being deemed qualified to compete for political honors.

TAYLOR THOMAS DEAD.

He Died at the Home of His Father in Tyrone.

After a severe illness for about eight and a half months, Charles Taylor Thomas died at the home of his father in Tyrone at ten minutes before 8 o'clock Thursday evening. Taylor was the second son of John Thomas, and was one of thirteen children, five of whom died in childhood. His mother, Mrs. Susan Thomas, died in Tyrone on the 15th, of September, 1892. Beside the father, the seven members of the family who survive are: Hettie, who is married and lives at Boston, Mass.; Lewis, Mary, Rachael, Walter, Emma and Finis, all at the family home in Tyrone.

The deceased was about 7 years old when his father and family removed from Bellefonte to Tyrone. Had he lived till the 17th of September next he would have been 23 years old. He was an industrious young man and had many warm friends among his acequaintances in Tyrone and elsewhere.

The funeral occured Saturday. A short service was held at the house at 7 o'clock in the morning, and the remains were conveyed to Bellefonte for burial on the 8.10 a. m. train. Regular funeral services were held at the Bellefonte A. M. E. church at 1.30 in the afternoon, after which interment was made in the Union Cemetery.

Fees of Policemen.

The following act regulating the remuneration of policemen and constables was approved by Governor Hastings July 14, 1897:

Section 1. That from and after the passage of this act all municipalities or corporations, employing policemen within the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, shall pay to all such policemen a fixed or stipulated salary, and that hereafter it shall not be lawful for such policemen to charge or accept any fee or compensation, in addition to his salary, for any service rendered or performed by him of any kind or nature whatsoever pertaining to his office or duties as a policeman, except public rewards and the legal mileage allowed for traveling expenses.

Section 2. That from and after the passage of this act it shall not be lawful for any high, ward, township or other constable, who is at same time employed as a policeman in any city, borough or other part of this commonwealth, to charge or accept any fee or other compensation, in addition to the salary paid to him as a policeman, for any service rendered or performed by him pertaining to his office or duties, either as a policeman, or as such high, ward, or other constable, except public rewards and the legal mileage allowed to constables for traveling expenses.

Section 3. Any policeman or constable employed as a policeman as aforesaid violating any of the provisions of the several sections of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding fifty dollars and costs, or undergo imprisonment in the jail of the proper county, not exceeding thirty days, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Section 4. That all acts or parts of acts in force at the date of the passage of this act, inconsistent with its provisions, are hereby repealed.

When they put a man in jail, he cannot follow his natural inclinations

He cannot eat what he wants to—he is limited to a very frugal die

Is it not equally true of a dyspeptic? For all of the real enjoyment he gets out of life, he might as well be in jail. He cannot eat what he likes nor enough. He suffers much, gets little sympathy. At first, perhaps a little heaviness in the stomachs a little sourness, windy belching and heartburn; headaches and billiousness and a foul taste in the mouth in the morning. Chronic constipation is almost inevitable, and means that the body is holding poisonous, impure matter that should be gotten rid of. The poison is being readsorbed into the blood and the whole body. Impurity in the blood may lead to almost any disease. Constipation is the start of it all. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation, cure it so it stays cured

GONE HOME TO REST.

Belle May Beverly Entered the "Golden City" Tuesday Morning.

"Oh, death, where is thy sting; oh, grave, thy victory?" One by one the ones we love and hold most dear to us are taken away, and it seems hard to understand why it is done, but some day, yes, some day we shall understand.

Tuesday morning at 2 o'clock the angel of death entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heverly and carried into the "Golden City" the soul of Belle May Heverly; yes, she was carried to her home above, where there is no sorrow, and no pain, but where there is rejoicings of great joy.

Miss Belle had been a patient sufferer since last April, when she took a cold which resulted in catarrh of the stomach. The family physician labored hard to cure her, but it was to no avail; she grew worse and worse until the disease developed into consumption. She lingered and suffered a great deal, until the Master said "Well done, thou good and faithful one, enter now into the joy, the peace and rest of One who loves you best," and at last she slept peacefully away.

Miss Belle was loved and honored by all who knew her and, truly, it can be said of her as was said of Hugh Beaver, "None knew her but to love her." She was a consistent Christian member of the Presbyterian church for over ten years, and always tried to walk in the paths of righteousness. She was never known to murmur a complaint of any kind, and when any of the family were tried or troubled she would always try to comfort them with her cheering words and sisterly love; and another good feature in her life was, she always enjoyed attending services at her own church and listening to her pastor expound the Scriptures to her. And so this bright and useful person has been taken to her eternal home, and left this one, although a happy and comfortable one, for a better and a more glorious one on high. By her being taken away it leaves the family circle broken; her place in the home can never be filled, and although it is sad and very hard to lose such a useful one it is a comfort to know that she is safe in the bright and glorious "Land of Beulah" and that on that fair morn of morns when the trumpet shall sound and the roll is called we are sure that she will be there.

Miss Belle May Heverly was born at Axe Mann, December 7th, 1867, and died August 3rd, 1897, making her age 29 years, 7 months and 27 days.

She leaves to mourn her loss a dear, loving mother, who never left her bedside from the time she took sick until her death, and who would have laid down her own life to save her's; she leaves this mother, and father, and three loving sisters and four brothers, namely: Mrs. Thomas Howley, Alice and Maggie, and Elmer, Alfred, Augustus and Edward.

Interment will take place this Thursday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock. The services will be held in the Presbyterian church, Rev. Dr. Laurie officiating.

Amos Parsons Killed.

The following dispatch appeared in Monday's Pittsburg Times. The man killed is said to be Amos Parson of this place.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 1.—James S. McKean, former postmaster of Pittsburg, and R. Wilson, also of that city, with a party of friends, were to-day participants in a runaway accident which had a fatal termination. The horses attached to the carriage in which they were seated took fright on New York avenue and dashed madly down toward the ocean. Half way down the street the carriage crashed into a pole, and the driver, Amos Parsons, aged 20 years, was thrown under the horses' hoofs and trampled to death. Mr. McKean and his friends were thrown out and badly bruised and cut. The driver was alive when picked up, but died 20 minutes after being admitted to the hospital.

AN EVENING BLAZE.

The McCafferty Block Scourged By Fire the Second Time.

About 9:00 o'clock Tuesday evening fire broke out in one of the rear kitchens in McCafferty's block, and next to Hogarth & Huffman's boiler shop. The fire had gained great headway before it was discovered and it looked for awhile as if the big tenement house and the boiler shop next to it were both doomed. However, by prompt and effective work on the part of the Logan and Undine Fire companies they finally succeeded in checking the progress of the flames. For over two hours the boys battled against the fire fiend; it proving to be one of the most stubborn fires ever seen in Bellefonte. Again and again the flames would die down, only to break out with renewed fury in some other part of the building; and it was long past midnight before the fire companies left the scene. The building is a large frame structure, situated near the P. R. R. depot and alongside of their tracks, and will accommodate four families; but, fortunately, it was unoccupied at present, as it was being repaired from the effects of a fire which almost burned it to the ground a few months ago.

The fire also spread to the boiler shop, damaging it considerably. Carpets, furniture and tools, belonging to Hogarth & Huffman, were damaged to the amount of about $200.00. Their loss is covered by insurance.

The repairs on the McCafferty block were almost completed and they expected to begin papering some of the rooms to-day, as a tenant had been secured for the part next to the boiler works. Mr. McCafferty also owns the building occupied as a boiler shop, which was somewhat damaged. His total loss is placed at $1,000.00, fully covered by insurance.

The origin of the fire is a mystery, as no one occupied the house, and there had been no fire about the place that day.
